

AUCTION PROCESS INCREASES SETTLEMENT BID BY 226%

UTILIZES UNIQUE FORMAL, WRITTEN BID PROCESS

THE SITUATION

Doug Fox, a former college athlete and owner of a sports supply business, purchased a $1.5 million universal life insurance policy in 2002 for estate planning purposes. Doug, now age 64, was referred by his attorney to a ValMark Advisor for a comprehensive life insurance review. When the policy was purchased, the planned premium was $16,000 per year. An increased premium of $82,000 per year was now needed to maintain this policy to age 100. Doug no longer needed the policy for estate planning purposes and had serious health impairments, reducing his life expectancy to between 28 and 94 months. A life settlement was recommended by the Valmark Advisor.

BID PROCESS CREATES UNEXPECTED VALUE

Our unique bidding process allowed potential providers to submit their initial blind bid which ranged from $100,000 to $250,000. Once the initial offers were submitted, the ValMark Life Settlement Team began its auction process. The auction process ran for 28 rounds resulting in a final high offer of $815,000 gross². Had Doug surrendered this policy he would have received $500.

THE OUTCOME

Initially, Doug was prepared to surrender the policy for $500. At the outset of the bidding process, he was willing to accept the initial low offer of $250,000. By going a step further with our auction process, Doug ultimately was able to receive the true market value for the sale of his policy. The result of working with multiple providers was a final offer that was 226% higher than the initial offer on this policy (before commissions and expenses²).

THE TAKEAWAY

In 2015, investors purchased $1.7 billion of U.S. life insurance face value.³ This is a positive indicator for the future of the life settlement industry. It is the responsibility of the advisor to educate clients regarding the life settlement option. Consider a life settlement as an alternative to lapsing or surrendering the policy.

In such cases, the client can always surrender their policy to the carrier if the coverage is no longer needed. - In a life settlement agreement, the current life insurance policy owner transfers the ownership and beneficiary designations to a third party, who receives the death proceeds at the passing of the insured. As a result, this buyer has a financial interest in the seller's death.
- A policy owner should consider the continued need for coverage, and, if the policy owner plans to replace the existing policy with another policy, the policy owner should consider the availability, adequacy and cost of comparable coverage.
- Policy owners considering the need for cash should consider other less costly alternatives.
- When an individual decides to sell their policy, he or she must provide complete access to his or her medical history, and other personal information, that may affect his or her life expectancy. This information is requested during the initial application for a life settlement.
- After the completion of the sale, there may be an ongoing obligation to disclose similar and additional information at a later date.
- Individuals should discuss the taxation of the proceeds received with their tax advisor.
- ValMark Securities supervises all life settlements like a security transaction.
- A life settlement may affect the insured's ability to obtain insurance in the future and the seller's eligibility for certain public assistance programs, such as Medicaid, and there may be tax consequences.
- ValMark and its registered representatives act as brokers on the transaction and may receive a fee from the purchaser.
- A life settlement transaction may require an extended period of time to complete. Due to complexity of the transaction, fees and costs incurred with the life settlement transaction may be substantially higher than other securities.
- Once the policy is transferred, the policy owner has no control over subsequent transfers.
- If you are an investor or a buyer of a life insurance policy then you should be aware that:
 - " Investment in a life settlement is highly speculative.
 - " Although a substantial profit may be realized, a substantial loss is also possible.
 - " The death benefit may never be paid.
 - " Additional funds may need to be invested to pay premiums if the insured lives substantially longer than expected.
